There are some basic road safety rules that kids should obey. Firstly, they should learn what each traffic light colour expresses and what they have to do when the traffic light turns green, yellow, and red. For example, when the traffic light is green, it means the vehicles can move. Secondly, children, especially kids under 8, need to hold the hands of adults while crossing the roads. Besides, kids need to know that the footpaths and pavements are places for walking and kids should use them every time they walk on the road. In case there are no footpaths, children should walk at a safe distance from the edge of the road so that they can see the vehicles coming to them. Finally, children should not play near roads. There are a lot of vehicles moving at a high speed on roads. This makes playing near roads unsafe for kids as they might run onto the road during their game. Thus, the safe places for children to play are public parks and school grounds.

Future Homes

In recent years there have been many predictions about what our houses will be like in the future. Some experts think we will all live in boxes; others think we may actually live on the moon or another planet. Two things are clear. We will use power from the sun, wind or sea and computers will control everything in our lives and especially in our homes.

Every house will have devices to change energy from natural sources into power, and we'll build houses that can use this power efficiently. Computers will open and close doors to allow people to come in and out and they will make sure the house and the people in it are safe.

They will switch on the lights when we go into different rooms or switch on gadgets when we ask them to. They will know when the fridge is empty and order food automatically. They will even tell us who has visited the house while we were out and at what times.

Rooms will be smaller than today but furniture like beds, tables and chairs will come out of the floors and walls when we want to use them. Again, the computer will do this for us.

Some experts predict that computers will control the entire world in the future, so perhaps they might decide to shut us in our little boxes forever! There's a thought.

V/ Read the following passage. Decide if the statements 24 and 26 are True or False. Choose the correct answer for questions from 27 to 28. (1.25 points)

Earth is a unique planet in our solar system. Unlike the hot, rocky planets closer to the Sun or the cold, gas giants further out, Earth has the right conditions to support the life as we know it. Our atmosphere, a layer of gases surrounding the planet, acts like a giant blanket, trapping heat from the Sun and keeping the temperature within a range suitable for liquid water to exist. Water is essential for life, and Earth has a vast amount of it in liquid form on its surface – oceans, lakes, and rivers.

Earth is also the only planet known to have plate tectonics. This process involves giant slabs of rock, called tectonic plates, slowly moving around the planet's surface. The movement of these plates creates mountains, volcanoes, and earthquakes, but it also plays a crucial role in recycling nutrients and maintaining a stable climate.

Another key factor for life is Earth's magnetic field. This invisible shield protects us from harmful radiation coming from the Sun and other stars. Without this shield, life on Earth would be constantly bombarded by radiation, making it difficult, if not impossible, for life to exist.

True/False Statements (24-26)

24. _____ Earth has the same conditions as all other planets in the solar system.
25. _____ Plate tectonics only causes damage and has no positive effects.
26. _____ Without Earth's magnetic field, life would be exposed to harmful radiation.

Multiple Choice Questions (27-28)

27. What does plate tectonics mainly cause?

- A. Only earthquakes
B. Only mountains
C. Only volcanoes
D. Mountains, volcanoes, and earthquakes.

28. Why is the magnetic field important?

- A. It protects Earth from harmful radiation.
B. It's a source of light for the planet.
C. It attracts meteors away from Earth.
D. It helps birds navigate during migration

Earth is a unique planet in our solar system. Unlike the hot, rocky planets closer to the Sun or the cold, gas giants further out, Earth has the right conditions to support the life as we know it. Our atmosphere, a layer of gases surrounding the planet, acts like a giant blanket, trapping heat from the Sun and keeping the temperature within a range suitable for liquid water to exist. Water is essential for life, and Earth has a vast amount of it in liquid form on its surface – oceans, lakes, and rivers.

Earth is also the only planet known to have plate tectonics. This process involves giant slabs of rock, called tectonic plates, slowly moving around the planet's surface. The movement of these plates creates mountains, volcanoes, and earthquakes, but it also plays a crucial role in recycling nutrients and maintaining a stable climate.

Another key factor for life is Earth's magnetic field. This invisible shield protects us from harmful radiation coming from the Sun and other stars. Without this shield, life on Earth would be constantly bombarded by radiation, making it difficult, if not impossible, for life to exist.

24. _____ Earth has the same conditions as all other planets in the solar system.
 25. _____ Earth's atmosphere helps keep the temperature suitable for liquid water.
 26. _____ Plate tectonics plays an important role in recycling nutrients and maintaining a stable climate.

- A. It creates beautiful landscapes. B. It helps maintain a stable climate.
 C. It makes the planet spin faster. D. It allows humans to build tall buildings.

28. Why is the magnetic field important?

- A. It's a source of light for the planet. B. It protects Earth from harmful radiation.
 C. It attracts meteors away from Earth. D. It helps birds navigate during migration
